

I created a low-fidelity shopping cart page for the Bun Bun Bake Shop. This design deviated a lot from my previous plan. It shows information in a horizontal bar, which allows more products to be displayed on the page. The design reduces the effort for customers to scroll down if they added a lot of products. All the interactive elements (add, remove, check out, close) are near the right side of the page for customers to quickly access and edit. There is a clear visual hierarchy with the more important information either bolded or enlarged. The checkout button is exceptionally large as it's the most dominant and desired action. Overall, the design is clear and simple for customers to experience a fast and easy check out process.
